 of the Pacific and from all points west of the Mississippi. This reconditioning saves the tax payer thousands of dollars per year.
 The depot is not just a storage center. It receives, stores, and ships food, clothing, and working materials to the ships of the fleet and outlying bases which dot the map of Southern California. Both fresh and dry provisions are carried, part of the stock being supplied by local concerns, it was announced.
 Korean relics will also be on display Saturday. In addition, a fire drill will be staged. The storage area maintains its own fire department, security police force, garage services, and all maintenance of vehicle equipment for the supply depot both in Torrance and San Pedro.
 Many of the employees working here are Torrance residents. A safety engineer sees to it that good safe practices are always carried out in regard to all activities.

Recreation . . .
 ing an amount equal to the city's on recreation. According to those figures, the joint outlay would come close to $100,000.
 Figures
 Judge Shider commented that about $23,895 on the regular budget and $15,918 for summer school could be thought of as the schools' contribution toward what might be considered recreation. It has been pointed out, however, that the major portion of this money goes towards adult education and a recreational program limited to the summer. Thus neither the all-year program is aided substantially nor the teen-age group affected, which two elements are really the focal point of the recreational issue.
 The various topics which were drawn up for consideration by the discussion groups at each of the tables were well broken down. But the "solution" which was reached by the decisive parties leaves much to be desired, observers felt.

Resoning . . .
 the Torrance community, it was revealed. It was also stated that there was enough industrial land available and being used.
 Con
 Those opposing the rezoning held that the city stood to benefit more from industrial taxes than residential taxes and that industry must be established before homes for workers. It was also maintained that residences constructed next to industrial property and a railroad track could only lead to a source of trouble.
